COVID-19 / CORONAVIRUS Update

(Updated April 14, 2020)

Mercury United Electronics, Inc. is actively monitoring the COVID-19 outbreak. We have been taking actions to safeguard the health and safety of our employees by participating in the CDC's social distancing guidelines and California's stay-at-home order. At the same time, our business is fully operational, with minimal impact from COVID-19.

Sales and Engineering will be providing off-site support with no delays in our response time. To assist the medical community, Mercury United is currently prioritizing orders from the medical equipment manufacturing industry, especially those that are ventilator-related.

We have identified areas we consider critical to operate and have implemented operational continuity plans within our teams to ensure we have sufficient resources to keep plants running safely and ship products to our customers.

The entire global supply chain has been impacted due to the COVID-19 outbreak. Fortunately, it has led to NO impact to our volume production at Mercury Taiwan, nor has it impacted the domestic builds in Southern California at Mercury United, including the quick-turn QuikXO product line.

We understand that many of our customers are facing a tremendous amount of uncertainty. We will continue to provide updates as we learn more. We are confident in our preparation and contingency planning for situations such as this. We remain committed to providing the superior service and support that our customers have come to expect of our company.

Wishing you, your colleagues, and your loved ones' health and safety during this unprecedented time.
